When the four men had arrived the Tammany boss turned over one of the rooms of his suite to them and told them to go ahead and thrash out the Hearst-Smith situation. Reports from the conference, later, however, indicated that no better understanding had been reached, the up-state Smith men still holding out for no compromise. It is understood that both Mayor Hylan and McCooey offered again on behalf of Hearst to take either place on the ticket, Governor or Senator, if Smith would consent to run with Hearst. Again, it was said, the Smith men turned down the suggestion. Murphy himself did not take part in the conference.

On the other hand, if he does not nominate Hearst, the whole power of the Hearst newspapers will be turned the Hearst newspapers will be turned against him—or, at least, he is afraid it will. Furthermore, Mayor Hylan may be moved to throw a few Tammany men out of fat offices, and there may be a revolt of the McCooey faction in Brooklyn. It is not surprising, therefore, that the boss, on the few occasions when he has whisked through the lobby of the hotel on his way to his car, has worn a decidedly worried look, and that his pink forehead has been bedewed with large drops of troubled perspiration.

According to the leaders, there now appears to be a very small chance for any compromise that would be satisfactory to Hearst, and an equally small chance of bringing out a compromise candidate.
